ABOUT THIS — AND — ABOUT THAT

By OLIVER GEDEIST

They'll Be Better Citizens

The other day an interesting report came to my desk. So much trashy propaganda for a hundred and one things comes this way that this was truly refreshing. A large group of 4-H boys from a number of states, the report stated, soon will leave for England. There they will be guests of an English farm group and will be paired in groups to work on farms, attend farm meetings, and become better acquainted with English people.

But that's not all. After a few weeks, the boys will visit the Scandinavian countries and Holland and Belgian and French farms to get acquainted with farm habits there. Total time to be in Europe, about eight weeks. It would be fortunate if more American youth could learn the best in our international neighbors. That way, hatred, largely based upon ancient religious disagreements, could be wiped out. And that would be at least one high road to world peace.

Innocents

Political and economic innocents are talking about increasing bank reserves to control bank over-lending. A "study" of the question has been announced. The more a bank must hold from deposits as a reserve the less the bank can lend to home builders and to business operation. The "study" has been paraded as something new. Yet it's as old as financing. The men who made the study must know that. But, finding themselves at a loss as to how to control EVERYTHING, they play around in the backyard of multitudes of serious failures. Apparently it is most difficult to be sensible when one gets on a political payroll.

A Bad Sign

Businesses are too often reporting losses. While a few large manufacturers have made unusually large profits during recent months, too many are reporting serious losses. Which bears out the simple sensible fact that business, big or little, suffers as individuals suffer under sky-high prices. It's a bad sign. A more moderate attitude toward the need of "labor" and the needs of business on the part of management and labor would help to make for continuing modest prosperity. There's too much of the jungle habit on both sides.

One Big Need

Death time is coming. Vacation time, that is. Careless motorists and careless children, and some older persons, will contribute to the vacation death. So will fathers and mothers who do little to train children to observe ordinary rules for safety. The wild driver, oblivious of all except his own self-importance on the road, will create road accidents—and injury and death. Careless swimmers will die—lots of them. Some one has said that wars and accidents are necessary to keep population under control.

But It's Nice

With all that, vacations are nice. Changes of scenes and environment are good for everybody. For those confined in office and factory most of their waking hours, vacations are a boon—it is a liberation into glories such as can be supplied only by Mother Nature. Go, of course, but be careful if you want to return home again in active form.

WSCS TO MEET

IT'S JUNE

The hills slope up and the hills slope down
And wear the trees for a leafy crown;
The shadows dance and the shadows play,
The brooklet murmurs the livelong day

For it is June.
The road winds up and the road winds down
Over the bridge and into the town;
The trees reach out and they give it shade

Where it passes through a pleasant glade
Where wild doves croon.
The wild flowers bloom in the thicket deep.

The trillium nods herself to sleep;
The hang bird swings in her swaying nest,
The day dies out in the rosy west

Too soon, too soon.
The queen sails up and the queen sails down
Over the bridge and over the town.
She sails on a fleecy cloud of white

For she is the regal queen of night
The silver moon.

BROODY HEN SAID TO BE BAD BREEDER

There is little space for a broody hen in today's farm laying flock, according to S. F. Riden, extension poultry specialist, University of Illinois college of agriculture. A hen that goes broody often does not have a high yearly rate of lay.

Riden suggests marking hens with a colored leg-band each time they become broody. A hen that has been broody a time or two should not necessarily be condemned; if she is handled properly, she may still make a good record. However, she should not be used for breeding purposes.

A broody hen can be easily and quickly broken by removing her from the nest as soon as you notice her. Confine her to a coop with a wire or slat bottom, and give her plenty of mash and water. She probably will start to lay again in 10 to 14 days.

FARM AND HOME U. ILL. TOPIC JUNE 14-19TH

Agricultural and home economics extension workers from 12 North Central states will meet on the University of Illinois campus June 14-19 to discuss the role of farm and home planning in the state extension programs.

Between 40 and 50 extension workers are expected to attend the discussion workshop, according to J. C. Spittler, associate director of the Illinois agricultural extension service. The states represented include North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio.

REPEAT PERFORMANCE

Every spring since a female mallard duck first built her nest in the top of one of the pilings at the Grand Trunk Western docks in Milwaukee four years ago, car ferry employees keep a close watch to see if "Carferry Carrie" will come back. And once she does return, the entire Grand Trunk staff worries until her eggs are safely hatched.

This year a 24-hour guard has been posted to protect the nest and strict orders issued that there must be no more "blowing down" of boilers in the slip while the eggs are hatching.

Here, Crescenzo Annunziato, section foreman, takes a look to see how the eggs are coming along.

Carferry Carrie has caused a great deal of concern because of her frequent flights away from the nest, but Warren Dettmann, of the Milwaukee Public Museum, says that this will not harm the eggs. Carrie needs to take time out to get herself a bite to eat, he said, and in swimming around, she gets her breast feathers wet. The wet feathers keep the eggs moist, preventing the shells from getting dry and hard. Otherwise, the ducklings would have "a heck of a time" breaking out, he explained.

Fly Control Notes

Sanitation should be the basis of all fly control.

Flies develop from eggs to pupae in about one week.

House flies transmit over 20 diseases of humans.

DDT will control cattle lice, hog lice, fleas, and sheep ticks.

DDT is not effective on ox warbles, horse flies, or for mange or scab on livestock.

Window screens and screen doors should be treated with 5 per cent DDT spray.

All decaying organic materials should be disposed of twice a week to prevent flies from breeding.

Applying 5 per cent DDT dust to dense growths of shrubbery will help to reduce the mosquito population about the home.

Controlling stable and horn flies on milk cows will increase the milk yield up to 15 per cent over a three-month period.

A farmer cannot rely solely upon the use of DDT to eliminate flies. He must observe good sanitary practices.

When flies on beef cattle are controlled, at a cost of 15 to 20 cents a head, the animals will gain up to one-third pound a day more if not treated.

McCauley of Winnetka, committee chairman. MEDICAL GROUP STRESSES NEED FOR VENEREAL DISEASE CARE

Education is a matter of acquiring knowledge and yet people foolishly persist in remaining ignorant when it comes to being informed on venereal disease, according to a Health Talk issued by the educational committee of the Illinois State Medical society.

Veneral diseases are usually associated with disgrace—another foolish notion. Having a venereal disease is no more disgraceful than having pneumonia, measles, an ulcer, or any other serious illness. The disgrace is, first of all, in the refusal to help prevent the disease, which, after all, is a social problem, and secondly, the refusal when infected to do something about it. Because it is a social problem and a preventable condition, locating the persons with the disease is essential.

Veneral diseases are usually acquired through sex relations. Other ways of contracting one of the many types of venereal disease are possible. For example, the congenital form of syphilis is responsible for many stillbirths or for crippled sickly children when they live.

Penicillin Best

Syphilis is caused by an organism known as "spirochaeta" or "treponema pallidum." This organism was identified in 1905, although the disease was first called syphilis in 1530. Constant research has gradually brought forth many effective treatments and cures. The time limit, however, varied until the arrival of penicillin, which currently is the most successful of all drugs in the treatment and cure of the disease. Because this drug can be termed a miracle drug does not mean that the person with syphilis should attempt self-medication. The drug must be administered by a physician and the person afflicted must remember that patience must be exercised in effecting a cure. Frequently even though the condition appears to clear up, the organism may remain active in some remote part of the body or encased in some organ or tissue. If manifestations of the disease appear again, even after a number of years, treatment has been inadequate and must be started again. That is why periodic examinations and tests of the blood are important.

The first sign of syphilis is a small sore called a chancre, located where the infection enters the body. This usually occurs in the sex organs, but may appear in the mouth or on the lips or some other part of the body, depending on the contact.

Blinds Babies

Gonorrhea is another venereal disease. It, too, is caused by a germ, usually through sexual contact, although it can be transmitted from one person to another by unsanitary conditions, such as unclean toilet devices, drinking cups, roller towels, and from soiled hands. It is responsible for a considerable number of cases of blindness, attacking infants at birth and is a serious disease, because once the organisms are in the body they may spread to the tubes and ovaries of a woman and start an infection which frequently necessitates the removal by operation of these organs. In men the disease involves the sex organs and may produce sufficient damage to destroy the reproductive functions. It never, however, becomes a systemic disease as in the case of syphilis.

Penicillin and streptomycin are effective in the treatment of both syphilis and gonorrhea. Sulfa drugs, such as sulphonamide and sulphathiazole, help in the treatment of gonorrhea, but are not effective in syphilis.

That these conditions are a distinct public health problem are reflected in the report of the Illinois state department of health recently indicating that venereal diseases were the greatest cause of illness during 1947, accounting for half of the cases reported. Gonorrhea, with 32,646 cases, led the list and syphilis placed second with 19,459 cases.

Veneral diseases can be eradicated. Blood tests assist in evaluating the progress of the disease.

Mastitis May Be Caused By Dog Chasing

Rover may be a big help in getting the cows to the barn for milking, but if he makes them run he may also be helping to cause mastitis, says Dr. E. A. Woelffer, extension specialist, University of Illinois college of veterinary medicine.

Running a cow may cause bruises to the udder which will help to give mastitis a start. The teats and udder of your dairy cow may also be injured by loose fencing, trash piles, machinery in lots and pastures, insufficient bedding, cows butting each other, overcrowding, leaving the milker on too long, rough milking by hand or machine, or using milk tubes and teat plugs.

Damage to the teat opening and teat canal may allow mastitis bacteria to enter or increase the activity of those already there. Preventing teat and canal may allow mastitis bacteria to enter or increase the activity of those already there. Preventing teat and udder injuries is like investing time and money wisely—both pay big dividends. Doctor Woelffer says. He urges prompt treatment of all teat and udder injuries, no matter how small, and removing the causes of injuries whenever possible.

*Is there really a "key"
to security?*

That's not just literary license.

There is a key, and you can see it on the face of every greenback issued by Uncle Sam.

Take out a dollar bill—or a hundred-dollar bill, if you have one. You'll see the key near the bottom of the little colored seal.

Enough of these keys in your possession and you can open all the doors to future happiness for yourself and family.

How to be a key-saver

Thousands of Americans have found the easiest, safest way in the world to save money, to make it grow—with United States Security Bonds.

Many of them are building a fund for the future through the Payroll Savings Plan.

Those not on a payroll are taking advantage of America's Best Buy through the Bond-A-Month Plan at their bank.

Are you one of these people? Or will your future security be locked behind the door of neglect?

STABILIZES ECONOMY... What's more, every Bond you buy does its part to keep economy strong. Wise saving means more sensible spending. Fewer dollars go to market to bid up prices on scarce goods.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Three Mighty Important Ideas

Maybe you read, where a great encyclopedia has sorted all basic ideas into a few select groups. Under the letter "T" they have:

Temperance - Truth - Tyranny.

Sounds like a funny combination. And to philosophize a little, notice that Truth is in the center--between Tyranny and Temperance.

Now and then you hear folks criticize temperate people who enjoy a moderate glass of beer... who talk about "two beers" getting some one into trouble, and claim: "There ought to be a law!"

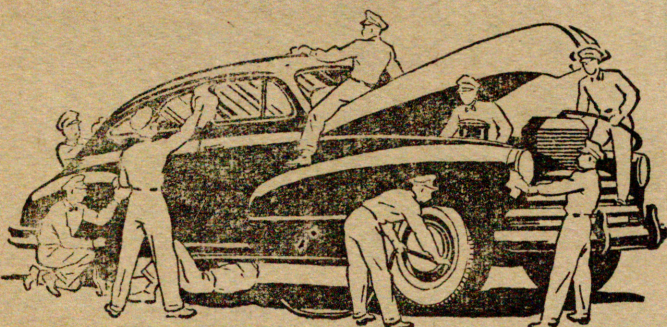

Then Truth steps in between, and points out that two beers never got anybody into trouble--and that somebody's trying to distort the facts. No, there shouldn't be a law--there should be Truth.

From where I sit, those ideas are arranged just right. Temperance on one side, Tyranny on the other--and Truth in the middle--seeing that Tyranny never encroaches upon Temperance.

Flies Multiply With Amazing Rapidity

It may not be exactly true that for every fly killed there will be a million less flies later in the season. However, entomologists say that if every adult fly could find a suitable place to lay its eggs and if all larvae hatched from these eggs could reach maturity, a single pair of flies could produce 191 septillion flies during the season. (That is 191 with 18 zeros after it.)

Put another way, it is estimated that if all the flies developing from a single fly lived and reproduced to their potential capacity, they would cover the entire surface of the earth to a depth of 47 feet.

Weed Killer 2-4-D Can't Do Job Alone

The new weed killer 2-4-D can be a big help in your fight to kill field bindweed. However, recent research indicates that 2-4-D probably won't do the job alone. It probably will take chemicals plus clean cultivation plus patience to get the job done.

One thing to remember about bindweed is that the plant spreads through both the root system and seeds. That means both must be destroyed before you will have complete control. And the seeds may live in the soil a long time.

Here are some general suggestions based upon a report of the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

Sprays containing 2-4-D should be used when the bindweed is in the bud stage. This will keep the seeds from forming. Sprays containing chlorate may also be used effectively. Amounts to be used and directions should be obtained from the farm adviser.

Bare-fallowing or clean cultivation of an intertilled crop will destroy most of the old roots in from one and a half to two years. Sweep-type cultivators with overlapping blades are better than disk or shovel types. And to do the best job, you'll want to cultivate about three or four inches deep.

Town and Country Fashions

By VI-VENNETTI

Fashion has not gone rustic. Far from it. But in her never-endings-each for something new, she has gone back to pure natural fibers—pure silks, pure linens, pure fine, long-stapled cotton.

From time immemorial, the great ladies of the ancient and modern world have been clothed in these "real" fabrics. It was only when the inventive genius of the machine age created man-made fabrics that could be endowed with almost miraculous qualities that the natural fiber fabrics fell from their estate. Nevertheless, anything that they lacked in smartness and originality they made up in quality. Consequently they remained in the background of our fashion picture, always there for such staples as lingerie, silks, printed silks, classic linens, to be taken or left.

For the first time in nine years, we have again all the natural fiber fabrics back again in full supply. This year we have other pure silks, and these have added greatly to and influenced the smart summer fashions. First the return of silk sheers, particularly chiffon, one of two vital factors in the revival of the important "veiled" dress fashion, cotton organdie and eyelet being the other. Pure silk crepe Elizabeth has also reappeared—in very feminine dresses, over rustling taffeta slips.

Pure silks and shantung hold the stage as the basic summer dress as well as being in the moderate price class.

As For Glamor

The beautiful linen dress trimmed with venise lace, dyed-to-match, is one of the big glamor dresses of the year. It is so important that it has been responsible for the revival of the whole dyed-to-match lace-trimmed dress fashion that bids fare to sweep the country again as it did a score of years ago. Last, but not least, there are the fine cottons made available again.
